

The present invention relates to one or more cellulose casings, either reinforced or not, that are able to transfer colour to the product stuffed therein. Said casings contain a food colouring that can be transferred to the stuffing during the processing thereof. The present invention also relates to the method for producing the casing and the product stuffed in said casing.