

The invention relates to a method for producing a wrapping for a paper roll, the paper roll having a wound paper web (2) and two opposing end sides and a circumferential surface connecting the end sides to each other, the method involving the following steps: applying a protective material (10) in liquid form to an end section of the paper web (2) by means of at least one application mechanism, the protective material (10) being applied to one or two sides of the end section of the paper web (2); winding the end section of the paper web so that the end section forms at least one outer layer of the paper roll; and curing the protective material (10) so that a protective layer covering the circumferential surface is produced.