

Invention relates to method for improved purification of proteins synthesized by bacterial producers using polycationic flocculants to remove cellular debris, obtaining high-purity solution with the aid of polycationic polymers/flocculants following the steps of homogenization of cell suspension, refolding of target protein, and enzymolysis of target molecule.